How Norway Citizens Can Find Freedom from Kidney Troubles.

If you suffer from backache—From urinary disorders—Any curable disease of the kidneys, Use a tested kidney remedy. Doan's Kidney Pills have been tested by thousands. Grateful people testify. Can you ask more convincing proof of merit?

L. E. Monk, Pleasant street, South Paris, Me., says: "About ten years ago I suffered every day from a lame back. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I knew that my kidneys needed attention. S. M. Doan told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a box. They did me so much good that I continued taking them and two or three boxes made me well. Another member of my family joins me in recommending this remedy. We have also advised other people to take them and will continue to do so."

Premonition.

It is the time when summer rests and dreams before she flees from autumn's sun and rain.

The hills are sombre, motionless, and mute, like to know what has become of the grasses leaning listless to the stream. Whisper of Pan's love-murmuring, reed-blended flute.

On sliver stems the clustered, purpling Is odorless in the sun's persuasive beams.

A tiny bird-cry quavers in the air, touched with a timid tenderness of grief—

Use a tested kidney remedy. Doan's Kidney Pills have been tested by thousands. Grateful people testify. Can you ask more convincing proof of merit?

A frosty shiver stirs the startled leaf. At hint of winter's white and cruel sway.

The Hills of Home.

Back to the hills of home I come, Child of the land of heart's desire, Child to the elm and white church spire,

Dark was the day I left its fields, Sick was my heart that day; Dear were the faces I could not see, Long was the path I could not see,

Back to the hills of home I come, Back to the hills of home I come, Swift through the open orchard gate, Of my family I join the throng,

Outstretched on the hills of home. —[Woman's Home.

The Woman Who Waits.

Who has not in passing in an evening before some cottage, or mansion, it may be, caught a fleeting glimpse through the window pane of a woman's eager face peering from behind the curtain at sound of footsteps and then fading into blankness at sight of form not looked for?

All have seen it perhaps many, many times. To any one who has not the first and simplest lesson in the deep mystery of a woman's life is only a dream undreamed.

The woman is waiting. For what? God and she alone know. There are so many things woman may wait for.

Perhaps it is for the lover. Or perhaps it is for the devoted husband, away winning the bread and for whom supper is ready.

Or the child out at play, whose time for return has passed and whose way the night threatens to darken.

Or the ever dark but for the unfailing light of the mother love, writes Charles Grant Miller in Woman's World.

Or—who knows?—the gallant son reported dead in shipwreck, distant land or battle, but for whose return she can never cease to hope and pray.

Or—God help her!—the drunken husband.

But there she waits. Aye, thus a woman ever waits. From the birth of her birth to the night of her death the woman waits. She waits and longs and hopes and prays.

It is not so with man. His faith is in his strength. He sets his shoulder to the storm with a firm resolve, and what he seeks to do he does or fails. And if success to him some woman shares of it, and if he fails some woman wants.

And so she waits. In her fresh, sweet young womanhood she knows a youth who pleases her, but he is cold and she must wait until he comes and wins.

And then, perchance, she loves too well, and when the faithless lover leaves she waits—she waits.

When husband turns from her to other joys, she waits—she weeps and waits. Ah, man knows not the patience sweet, the love and faith with which a woman waits!

How often she, in midnight gloom, beside the couch of dying child, must wait and wait, hope and wait, pray and wait!

Her waiting is not weakness, though; it is her strength.

If you, brave man, have ever been in battle line amid a rain of shell and rifle shot, and must not fire, but wait and wait and wait—why then you know what courage is.

But woman ever waits. The faith sublime with which the woman waits spiritualizes earth and humanizes.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh of the Bladder. This is the only positive cure now known to cure Catarrh of the Bladder. It is a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acts on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the system strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The promptness with which it cures, and the ease with which it is taken, are its great features. It cures in a few days for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. The Frogs and the Candle.

William J. Long, the naturalist, has made a study of frogs and their habits, and the following story from his book, "Wilderness Ways," tells of the strange power exerted over these creatures by a light.

The most curious and interesting bit of their strange life, he says, came out at night, when they were fascinated by my light. I used sometimes to set a candle on a piece of board for a float, and place in the water, close to the shore, where the ripples would set it dancing gently. Then I would place a little screen of bark at the shore end of the float, and sit down behind it in darkness.

Presently two points of light would begin to shine, then to scintillate, out among the lily-pads, and chigwoolts, bigger and brighter with wonder. He would place his forearms akimbo on the edge of the float, and lift himself, up, like a little old man, and stare steadily at the light. And there he would sit as long as I let him, just staring and blinking.

Soon two other points of light would come stealing in from the other side, and another frog would set his elbows on the float and stare hard across at the first one. And then two more shining points, and two more, till twelve or fifteen frogs were gathered about my beacon, as thick as they could find elbow room on the float, all staring and blinking like so many strange water owls.

One would rise to the bottom to debate the weighty things, with a flickering will-o'-the-wisp nodding grave assent in the midst of them. But never a word was spoken; the silence was perfect.

Sometimes one, more fascinated or more curious than the others, would climb on the float, and put its nose solemnly in the light. Then there would be a loud sizzle, a jump and a splash; the candle would go out, and the wondering circle of frogs would scatter to the lily-pads again, all swimming as if in a trance, dipping their heads under water to wash the light from their bewildered eyes.

Children's Column.

Dear Editor and young folks:—Why do you not write? I would certainly like to know what has become of the boys and girls of our Column. There must be lots of you somewhere and either you are too lazy to write or else you are afraid of our kind editor who has given us this space. Which is it? The riddle I sent was as follows:

Two-chin'd a cross, And a crook'd nose, And two semicircles A perpendicular doth meet. An angle triangle, Which stands on two feet, And two semicircles And a circle complete. The answer is TOMACCO.

Here is another. Opens like a barn door, Ears like a cat. Study all your bedtime. You can't study that.

Will send in answer next time I write. Please try all and make our Column interesting. I know a lot of these little riddles and will send one every time I write as long as the space permits.

Good bye all, I NA MAY BROWN. East Andover, Maine.

John L. Webber was a native of Oxford County and has relatives living here. He died at a hospital in Napa, Calif., Sept. 17th. He was one of the officials of Napa county being on the Board of Supervisors for many years.

Mr. Webber had suffered for many months with rheumatism, and although he had managed to keep on his feet and attend to his business affairs, still he had steadily lost strength and his robust constitution had been seriously undermined, when some two weeks ago an attack of acute pneumonia seized him. The patient steadily grew worse. Up to the very end he maintained consciousness and conversed with the dear ones at his bedside, bidding them a touching farewell with his last breath.

The remains have been removed to the family residence in Yountville.

Deceased was a native of Oxford County, Maine, where he first saw the light on December 13th, 1849. He went west and located at Carson City, Nevada, in 1870. In 1876 he came to Napa county, locating at Yountville, where his home was up to the time of his death. In 1880 Mr. Webber married Miss N. J. Grigsby, a daughter of the late J. J. Grigsby of Yountville, and he is survived by the widow and three sons and daughter—Eugene L. Webber, the superintendent of Napa County Infirmary; Samuel J. Webber, Warren W. Webber and Mrs. Laura Tarver. The home of Mrs. Tarver is in Berkeley. There are also left four brothers and six sisters. One of the sisters, Mrs. Emma Hutchins, resides in Berkeley. The others reside in the east.

John L. Webber made a record while Supervisor of Napa county of which any man should be justly proud. He saved his constituents in Yount District for two full terms, raising as everlasting monuments to his energy and efficiency stone bridges that are a credit to the county and roads that have been a source of constant delight to taxpayers—the "Webber boulevard" stretching from Dry Creek north through the town of Yountville, being universally recognized as the finest permanent macadamized county road in California. Mr. Webber was recently renominated for supervisor for a third term by the Republicans at direct primaries by an overwhelming vote. He was a man of excellent judgment and strict integrity.

The water in a great many public fountains, whether for man or beast, comes out of a lion's mouth. Did you ever stop to think why a lion's mouth should be chosen in preference to any other design? This is said to be the reason: Among the ancient Egyptians the rising of the waters of the River Nile was the most important event of the year as it meant life and prosperity to the whole nation. The rising of the waters always took place when the sun was in the constellation of Leo, or the lion, so they adopted the shape of a lion as the symbol for the life-giving waters of the Nile, and all their fountains were carved with a lion's head. The Greeks and Romans copied this symbol, and so it has come down to us.

Paint-Wise

Is to paint when your property needs it. Paint-folly to wait for the price to go down.

But so many are foolish, they'll wait a good while.

The whole rise in the cost of a job is 10 per cent. The first year's drop won't be more than half that, more likely a quarter.

Waiting for 5 per cent., more likely 2 1/2.

The average job (with Devco) is $50; 5 per cent., $2.50. Put it off for $2.50? Guess not.

You think of that job as $100. So it is with inferior paint.

Paint Devco; do it now, if your property needs it.

A STONE ROOFING

A good many people say and some people really think that none of the manufactured roofings are durable. Now this is a great mistake. A roofing that is composed of Asbestos and Portland Cement is practically everlasting. If you wish to pay the price, which is not very high either, you can have a roofing that will last as long as the Pyramids. As the philosopher John D. Rockefeller says about Sunday School, "The more you put in, the more you can take out."

Diet for the Sick.

Food Must be Intelligently Selected and Prepared.

To keep in good health a person must have a correct and sufficient supply of properly cooked food. One who is ill, especially if suffering from chronic disease, must also have his food supply intelligently selected and prepared if he expects to regain health.

For the growth of the body and for material to replace the loss due to the daily breaking down of muscular and other tissue, foods containing nitrogen are called protein foods and are required. In milk, eggs, fish, meat and cereals we find one chief supply of this kind of food. Water and the mineral salts found in most foods also assist in the daily repair of the body.

Starches, sugars and fats furnish the heat that keeps the body temperature at a given point regardless of the weather and also supply the energy or power to do one's work. Even when a person is ill in bed and taking no exercise a large amount of energy is used up in the involuntary movements of heart, lungs and digestive organs and this can only be supplied by the food eaten, or the fat stored in the body.

Milk is perhaps the best invalid food that we have as it contains the necessary material for growth and repair and for heat and energy and is inexpensive, easily procured, taken and digested and may be given in many different ways.

An invalid can derive sufficient energy from about 8 quarts a day, to prevent loss of weight, but he too doing gets too much water and protein and some starchy food as crackers, toast, and cereal may often be substituted for a portion of the milk with good results. Thus we have gruels, milk toasts and simple puddings, which give variety to diet.

In severe cases of fever, when starchy foods might be too difficult of digestion as much as 20 ounces of milk sugar and 2 to 5 ounces of cream may be given daily with 2 or 3 pints of milk, thus reducing the bulk and largely increasing the nutritive value of the milk, without over taxing the digestion.

One of the most popular ways of overcoming the taste of milk and at the same time adding to its food value is the mixing of 1/2 a glass of milk with 3 tablespoons of chocolate syrup, thus making a milk shake.

To prepare the syrup melt over hot water 4 squares, (1/2 pound) butter chocolate, add 1 cup sugar, a few grains salt and very slowly 1/2 cup boiling water. Boil gently for 10 minutes, cool and add 1 tablespoon vanilla. This will keep some time and may be used with hot or ice milk. An egg may be added if desired.

A very good gruel and one that is quickly prepared is made by rolling and sitting through a fine wire sieve enough common cracker to make one level tablespoonful. This is added to 1/2 cup milk heated over hot water and cooked 5 minutes. With the addition of 1/2 teaspoon salt the gruel is ready to serve.

To make it more easily digested the cracker may be browned all the way through in a slow oven before rolling. This cracker diet is much less expensive than the patent prepared foods on the market and quite as nutritious. Shredded wheat may be used in the same way.

When cereals, as rice, farina, oatmeal, corn meal and wheatena are used for gruel they should first be very thoroughly cooked for a long time with boiling water and rubbed through a sieve. They may then be reheated and diluted with milk or cream. A gruel should be thin enough to pass through a glass drinking tube and seasoned with salt rather than sugar.

Cream soups are excellent for convalescent patients. For a green pea soup, simmer 1/2 cup canned peas and 1/2 cup water 10 minutes. Add 1/2 cup milk and rub through a sieve. Milk 1/2 level tablespoon, 1/2 level teaspoon salt, 1/2 level spoon of flour and when smooth add the pea mixture. Stir until the soup boils, season with 1/2 teaspoon salt and a few grains pepper, strain into a cup and serve very hot. Corn, asparagus, spinach and cooked vegetables may be substituted for the peas. Mashed potatoes may be used without simmering in water. A bit of onion may be cooked with the vegetable if liked, celery salt used for seasoning.

These soups are much more nutritious than meat broths. Although broths are appetizing, stimulating and furnish variety in a liquid diet, they have almost no nutritive value and a prolonged diet of broth or beef tea is a starvation diet, as very little of the protein of meat can be drawn out either with cold or hot water.

In all the preparations for an invalid's tray the food should be made to look attractive and to taste good. It should be nourishing and easily digested, hot things served hot and cold things cold. Only by doing this can we expect to have our sick ones return to their accustomed health and strength.—Miss Alice Bradley, Teacher of Cooking, Boston.

Terribly Burned.

O. D. Hodge of Canton, was terribly burned about the face and arms, while at work at the Canton corn factory sealing cans.

He started to fill his gasoline lamp, which he was using in his work, when still lit. The flame took fire and spreading over his face and arms, it caused painful burns. The work also caught fire, but was extinguished by the men, who were at the place.

Mr. Hodge was taken home and a physician called to attend to his injuries. It seems a miracle that his eyes were uninjured.

High Price of House Lots.

Can any one in town inform the people who would buy some house lots if they could purchase them at a reasonable price? As it stands no one can look at a piece of land unless they contact with gold dollars. Why not tax these lots at the full extent of the law? Some lots on Main street are held as high as a thousand dollars. No one will undertake to purchase at that price.

Al Sanders of Portsmouth arrived in town this week.

Gustus Ward is doing a lively business in the bat stick line.

Stores close Tuesday and Thursday nights. Everybody goes to sleep.

Business is lively all around. It's hard to find a man to do any kind of work.

The fair is all over, no more excitement, everyone will den up for the winter.

Business is booming at the piano factory. Mr. Hobson is a hustler. Lots of orders.

Chas. Ladd and wife, and John Hutchins and wife attended the Fair at North Waterford.

Frank Merrill is a handy man in town. He can build a house or canoe and do all kinds of fancy painting.

Chas. Haley returned from the World's Fair at North Waterford. Says it beats the world for a good time.

Several sales of real estate will be made in town the coming fall such as dwelling houses and farms.

The people flock to Lovewell's Pond during the past warm weather. Only one man has been seen at the pond.

Prof. Forest McDaniel of Norway visited our Sanctorium last Friday and gave some fine selections on the violin and piano.

Mrs. Thoms, the proprietor of The Argonaut reports a good business during the fair also during the summer months.

John Harriman has purchased a large lumber lot in the Haley district and will commence operations at once. A good force of men will be put to work.

Fryeburg is getting its eyes open. In the near future we will have the best roads in any county in the State, under the management of our worthy road commissioner.

One of the largest crops of potatoes raised in town for many years. Other vegetables did remarkably well, a large crop of squash and pumpkins is reported by the local farmers.

The Jews that run a bar at the fair grounds got held up the second day. Our worthy Sheriff Messerve got on the track and soon brought them to justice. The fine and cost were somewhere near one hundred dollars.

W. W. Freeman claims to have the only Stradivari violin in this part of the country. It was made in Germany in the year 1747, is in perfect shape and sounds like a bird. Mr. Freeman don't profess to be a musician but keeps several instruments for his own pleasure. He also has several curious one of which I was very much interested in, called an aerolite, about the size of an acorn and very pretty, found at the foot of a high mountain in Colorado.

Mrs. J. W. Hubbard was in Boston last week.

John Hutchins has been in Vermont on a business trip.

J. M. Smith of Hollis has been a guest at Merritt Smith's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Towle have been spending a few days with Mrs. Chester Eastman at North Chatham.

Supreme Judicial Court

turned the verdict of guilty of assault and battery.

The case of Fred G. Newton of Dixfield for felonious assault came on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Newton keeps a small variety store in Dixfield and it is alleged that on Aug. 3, 1911, he feloniously assaulted little 10 year-old Hilda Hawkes at his store.

Vilda, a pretty little girl dressed in red, testified to being at the store along toward evening and told of the assault and said he told her not to tell his wife or her mother and he would give her a ride in his auto and some ice cream.

She returned home soon after seven and her mother noticing something wrong with the child made inquiries.

Mr. Hawkes consulted a lawyer and in the meantime a group of men called at Frank Brown's stable and called Mr. Newton in. Mr. Hawkes asked him if he hadn't been treating his child in a way that he wouldn't want his child treated if he had any and it is alleged he replied, "I suppose so," and upon reply received a thumping from Mr. Hawkes.

A little humor was mixed in when the lawyer was trying to prove that Mr. Newton had been convicted of crime. When asked he replied,

"I suppose that is what you would call it."

"And you paid a fine for beating Mr. Newton?"

"Yes," or rather the citizens of the town chipped in and paid it."

"So you admit you beat him?"

"Yes, and I would do it again."

Among the other witnesses to the affair were Frank Brown, George Durkin, Arthur Stanley, Alonzo D. Wentworth and Leon M. Sma.

The defense was then taken up and George Hutchins of Rumford was the attorney for the defendant. Mr. Newton claims he was in Rumford in the morning and purchased an automobile. In the afternoon he went to the hotel and to supper at the hotel with a friend and returned to the store at about 7 o'clock.

When he came to the store after returning from supper, his wife and Madeline Cummings were at the store. In the meantime Fred W. Smith of Carthage called there to see him about 6.30 and waited until his arrival which was about 7 o'clock. Madeline Cummings testified to being at the store on the day in question and that she did not see the Hawkes girl; that she and Mrs. Newton ate supper at the store and that after the closing of the store at about 10.30 they walked home with her.

Considerable was tried to be brought out concerning the affair on Monday at the Brown stable and the stories of the two sides corresponded to a certain extent. Mrs. Newton substantiated the story of her husband and that of Madeline Cummings and said she did not see the Hawkes girl on that day.

Fred W. Smith of Carthage testified to his visit to Mr. Newton on Aug. 3, his trip to Rumford and to Weld to the ball game in the afternoon and his visit at the store at about 6.30, and then went home in his auto with Victor Staples.

The jury returned the verdict for the defendant not guilty.

Harry Siddall and James Carney, both of Rumford, who were charged with breaking and entering, took up the attention of the court for the last time on Wednesday afternoon. It was claimed that on Aug 18 these men went to Mr. Janox's house on Holyoke Ave. in Rumford and opened the shed and entered the kitchen. It seems that they had made several visits to the Janox residence during the day to get some beer. R. H. Howard of Rumford testified he saw Carney on the front piazza and found Siddall in the kitchen rummaging through the cupboards.

Janox claimed the doors were locked when he and his family went out for a ride that afternoon, but when they returned the side door had been broken open, but did not miss any articles.

Siddall claimed he and Carney and another went there to get beer and upon knocking at the front door got no response and that Carney said he would go to the side door and see if the Janox people were at home. Upon reaching the side door he found it open a few inches and put his head in and hollered but did not enter the kitchen.

The jury on the Siddall and Carney case disagreed.

MY WANT OF WISDOM

By MOLLIE K. WETHERELL.

When I was eighteen years old, my father and mother both being dead, and I, not having a cent in the world, said to a friend one day that I thought I would take a trip to Europe. I well remember the look she gave me. Indeed, so impressed was she with the absurdity of my idea that she didn't think it worth while to remark upon it. The truth is I was dreaming aloud.

But a few weeks later I learned that I had been left a legacy of $400. Then I put my dream to practice. Dreamers are not understood. There is likely to be some method in their madness, but their more practical acquaintances take no cognizance of this. There was a method in my madness, though I hardly understood it myself. Perhaps my story will explain it.

What I did with my $400 was to buy a two months' trip to England and the continent of Europe.

When my friends heard of what I was about to do they wondered if they had not better shut me up in a lunatic asylum.

"She's certainly gone daff," said one. "What is she going to live on when she gets back?" remarked another.

"Do some hard work," put in a third. "That will take the nonsense out of her."

One of my chums repeated these remarks to me that I might benefit by them. But I didn't. I prepared for my journey and sailed away, remarking that I would have one good time in my life if I never had another. The last words I heard from the dock were:

"Are you coming home with that fortune?"

"Yes. A pleasant outing is a fortune in itself."

Now, I didn't know any more than they what was to happen to me. I certainly had no idea that my trip was to be completely spoiled, as it was. My room mate on the ship going out was a crabbled old maid. She was not only senile, but afflicted with an incurable disease. She was so stingy that she would not trip the room stewards who would do nothing for her. Being unable to go to the dining saloon for meals, the invalid ordered the stewardess to bring them in to her. The stewardess would not say, "Yes, m'm," go away and would not return.

What could I do—the creature starve? Of course not. I waited on her all the way over, and when we reached Southampton, she being unable to leave the ship without assistance, I was obliged to take her ashore with me. When I got her there I felt compelled to take her to London.

"Hurry up, you my relatives to come with you?" she asked.

"No, and I couldn't afford to pay the way of any of them if I had."

"Can't you afford to hire some one to take care of you?"

"No."

Well, the woman continued to grow worse. I had the choice of deserting her, leaving her to the tender mercies of nobody or staying with her. I didn't scruple to tell her that she was spoiling my trip. Her reply was that I had better go on and leave her to her fate. She might as well have told me to give her poison to get rid of her. At first she wouldn't do anything to relieve me if she could, and afterward she couldn't. She continued to sink, but remained alive, so that I couldn't get away from her and pursue my trip.

There was one curiosity in London I had always wished to see. One morning I gave a maid half a crown to take to the invalid for a few hours while I went to the tower. When I returned the maid told me that her charge had sent her out with a note for a man, who had come to her and been shut up with her for half an hour. He had taken other persons into the room, but only for a few minutes.

I didn't care to ask an explanation of this of the sick woman, for it was none of my business. Her illness continued so long that the time and money I had put aside for my trip were nearly exhausted. One day the invalid called me to her and said to me: "I'm going to die. I don't wish any doctor to tell me so. He would charge me £2 at least, and I know it myself. After my death you will find five sovereigns in my trunk. Bury me here. My bones are not worth taking to America. You'll find an envelope under my pillow. Take it to the address in Philadelphia written on it."

The woman died just before the steamer sailed on which I had engaged a return passage. I had barely time to find a place to bury her when I was obliged to go aboard. On reaching port several of my friends were at the dock to meet me. One of them called: "Did you see it all?"

"Oh, yes. I saw London; there's enough there to see without going farther. The tower is immensely interesting."

A few days after my arrival I thought of the envelope I was to deliver and took it to the address on it, Marbury & Smith, attorneys. One of the firm opened the envelope and took out a paper. Then he asked me some questions, finally inquiring my name. When I told him he gave me a quick glance and said:

"You are the beneficiary of this estate."

"Estate? What estate?"

"This is a will. It makes you heirless to property worth $250,000."

The moral of this story is that those who leave something to chance are not always wrong.

NORTH LOVELL.

Killed by a Live Wire.

It was a great shock to Mrs. Ruth Chandler when the sad tidings came that her brother, Eastman McAllister of Barton, Ohio, had been instantly killed by a live wire striking him around the body.

He was burned in a terrible manner, and his son, in trying to remove the wire burned his hands so badly that they have been useless since the accident.

Mr. McAllister was the son of Amos and Almada Lord McAllister of North Lovell, and has been in the West for over 30 years. He leaves a wife, six children and several brothers and sisters. It was a sad ending to a useful life.

Ida E. Bartlett.
Our community was saddened Sunday morning upon hearing that Mrs. Ida E. Bartlett had passed away at 12 o'clock, Saturday night at the home of her adopted daughter, Mrs. Andrews Smith, Mrs. Bartlett came to Denmark several days ago in poor health, but no one thought but what she would soon be herself again, but on Saturday she had an ill turn and her physician pronounced it pneumonia with threatened heart failure. She grew rapidly worse until the end came.

Mrs. Bartlett was well known here, having conducted The Bartlett House for several years. Since selling her home, which is now The Denmark Inn, she has made her home in Portland caring for Mr. Larabee, since the death of his wife, who was a dear friend of Mrs. Bartlett's. Mrs. Bartlett will be sadly missed. She was a member of the Mt. Pleasant Rebekah lodge and a kind hearted neighbor. Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 15.

Mrs. Emma Warren of Portland is at her brother's, D. S. Perkins'.

B. P. Strout of Bridgton has been canvassing the town the past week.

Charles Harnden recently shot a deer, the first of the season in this section.

Looking Backward In Otisfield.

By GRANVILLE FERNALD.
No. VI.

From its earliest history Otisfield maintained a good record for the soundness of its public school system. For a number of years from my early remembrance there was each autumn a high school at the schoolhouse on the hill near the residence of S. L. Knight, where since then a dense forest has grown up the old pasture. One of the principals of those schools was a Mr. Dole; another was Stephen Gould of Bridgton, and they were patronized by many of the best families in town, and students came from other distant towns in the county.

I remember a fine exhibition given by the members of the High school at the close of a fall term in the old meeting-house, consisting of declamations, dialogues and instrumental music by an amateur orchestra composed of Samuel Stephen and Benjamin W. Knight, violin, clarinet and violoncello or bass viol. I think so good music as was made by that little trio of players was probably never before heard by the town.

The times were of a class of popular patriotic marches and quicksteps of the period succeeding the Revolution, such as "On the Road to Boston," "Washington's Grand March" and "The Downfall of Paris," the latter being one of the favorite pieces for violin. This time the principal dialogue was "David and Goliath," the part of the Philistine champion being enacted by Maurice C. Blake, a son of Dr. Silas Blake, and the part of David by a young pupil by the name of Dunn. Perhaps the same I think, who became afterward Hon. David Dunn, a lawyer and noted politician.

I have mentioned in my chronicles of Holdenville a high school taught in that place in the fall of 1843 taught by Stephen R. Porter of North Yarmouth, of which I was a pupil, going on foot most of the time from my home at Bolster's Mills, about four miles. In after years there were a number of terms of high school in the present brick schoolhouse on Bell Hill taught by Silas Morton, Henry Wardwell of Albany and perhaps others. So the youth of Otisfield usually enjoyed fair opportunities to prepare for college or for teaching in the rural schools.

There were also singing schools from quite an early time, even before my remembrance, as I have heard related by my parents, who were both excellent singers by the old custom of the day, the scale of which was sung as follows:—Fa-Sol-La-Fa-Sol-La-Mi-Fa.

Two familiar singing books were in use for many years from colonial times down to the advent of the system of rotation introduced by the singing books published by the Boston Academy of Music. The first was the Boston Academy Collection of church music and anthems, compiled by Lowell Mason and George James Webb. That was one of the very first books to introduce the modern system of musical notation by the do-re-mi-fa method of the scale syllables.

After a number of years a new singing book was published and came into use everywhere. It was the Carminas, a little better than the last, than its predecessor. With these two books Dr. Lowell Mason was identified as the father of modern church music in America and of the modern system of teaching the art of reading music to the masses.

Now comes in the story of Otisfield's participation in the advanced methods of musical instruction and of its excellent church choir. It was the day of the revival of interest in the old-fashioned singing school and of the singing tutor and governor in all musical matters of the town for several years, shall be given the credit of promoting the educational revival of musical teaching and practice. The choir of the Bell Hill church was soon recruited with a fine lot of young singers, capable of producing any piece of music for any occasion called for.

One of the most notable celebrations of Independence Day on Otisfield Hill was during what I shall call the Shurtleff regime; for he was the last, and so seems to call for the harder kinds of brass—such as cornet or euphonium, trumpet, pulled bread, rye bread, the harder brown breads or crackers, and some of the numerous crisp ready-to-eat cereal breakfast foods. Bitter cookies, too, seem more suitable than rich, soft cakes or puddings for the dessert in such menus.

A few bills of fare are given below which experience has shown to represent combinations of dishes which are palatable and which, if eaten in usual amounts, will supply protein and energy in proportion with accord with usual dietary standards, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Menus such as these are more commonly served at lunch or at supper, but they might equally well be served for dinner, the selection of dishes for any kind of being of course, chiefly a matter of custom and convenience for those who have any range of choice.

Menu No. 1—Macaroni and cheese; raisin bread or date bread; orange and watermelon salad; baked apples; sugar cookies; cocoa.

Menu No. 2—Cheese fondue; toast; zwieback or thin crisp baking powder biscuit; celery; potatoes, baked, boiled or fried in deep fat; peas or some other fresh vegetable; coffee; fruit salad with crisp cookies or marjolines.

Menu No. 3—Cold soup; baked eggs with cheese or Boston roast; baked potatoes; lettuce salad; a sweet jelly, crab apple or quince, for example, or a preserve; rye bread; orange or banana shortcake; tea.

During the time partly covered by the incidents of this sketch another church building was erected at Spurr's Corner, where for years public religious services have been held as I am informed, but in ignorance of the circumstances of such prevalence of religious interest in that locality I cannot speak of it to any extent.

I will now give some reminiscences of other scenes and observations at the old meeting house.

From back in the period of subjection to the government of Massachusetts the citizens of Otisfield have been under the militia laws of that province to hold annual meetings of the enrolled soldiery of the towns and plantations in the district of Maine for training and drill in military tactics and marching evolutions.

The militia of Otisfield consisted of one uniformed company organized as the Otisfield Light Infantry. I cannot give the date of its organization, but I think it was in active existence until the repeal of the militia laws, and the abolition of annual trainings and musters of the militia sometime in the 40's.

The first Tuesday in May was the annual training day, and was one of the most prized holidays of the year. It was an occasion of infinite hilarity and fun. Every enrolled soldier of 15 to 45 years of age was summoned by the warrant of a non-commissioned officer of a company to appear at the old meeting house at an hour stated "armed and equipped" as the law directs and there await further orders.

The arms possessed by these soldiers were generally old-fashioned flint-lock muskets, such as had descended straight from previous wars, and used on occasion for shooting henbawks, woodchucks and squirrels or perhaps a bear, a fox or a bob-cat.

The lack of precision in marching and formation of files and platoons and the awkwardness of a company as farmers in executing the manual of arms without drill or practice on every day but one of the year (excepting general muster-day) may be imagined, but cannot be described. The light infantry of Otisfield was composed of an excellent quality of citizens and was an honorable constituency of the 2d Regiment, 1st Brigade, 5th division of the militia of Maine as I remember it. It was commanded at various times by Capt. Samuel P. Anderson, Capt. Otis Fernald, Capt. John Spurr, and, I think, Capt. Stephen W. Knight, and others before my remembrance of these events commenced.

The most popular sport for the young men of training age on training day, after the military exercises of the day were completed and the "awkward squad" had been dismissed from further duty, was wrestling.

It was on such an occasion I witnessed the finest game of wrestling I well-matched country farm-bred athletes I ever saw, and I have seen other good ones.

The contestants in this match were successively, as near as I recollect, Chas. Edwards of the Gore, a farmer and brick layer; Henry Turner, Jr., father of Elizabeth Turner of Bolster's Mills; Ambrose F. Wright and Josiah M. Blake. These are all I distinctly remember. The strength, agility and skill required for a good wrestler are rarely found in the same person, but the exercise of these qualities by well-matched contestants, is a grand illustration of the alertness and muscular power of prime manhood.

The next chapter of gossip will be about something else.

NOTE—As to wrestling there were at one time subsequent to the wrestling on the Hill on training day, three splendid wrestlers in town. I refer to Daniel O. Smith, Henry P. Chase and Marcus Wright, son of Horatio Wright of Casco.

Methods of Serving Cheese.
Housekeepers would probably find that if in planning menus of which a cheese dish is the chief feature, they were to take pains to supply crisp, watery vegetable, water cress, celery, lettuce, dressed with a dressing of salt alone or simple fruit salads, and would give preference to refreshing fruits, either fresh or cooked, rather than what are known as heavy desserts, they would in general be more successful in pleasing those who are served.

There is another point also to be considered in combining cheese with other foods. Whether it is raw or cooked it is likely to be somewhat soft, and so seems to call for the harder kinds of bread—such as rye bread, zwieback, toast, pulled bread, rye bread, the harder brown breads or crackers, and some of the numerous crisp ready-to-eat cereal breakfast foods. Bitter cookies, too, seem more suitable than rich, soft cakes or puddings for the dessert in such menus.

A few bills of fare are given below which experience has shown to represent combinations of dishes which are palatable and which, if eaten in usual amounts, will supply protein and energy in proportion with accord with usual dietary standards, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Menus such as these are more commonly served at lunch or at supper, but they might equally well be served for dinner, the selection of dishes for any kind of being of course, chiefly a matter of custom and convenience for those who have any range of choice.

Menu No. 1—Macaroni and cheese; raisin bread or date bread; orange and watermelon salad; baked apples; sugar cookies; cocoa.

Menu No. 2—Cheese fondue; toast; zwieback or thin crisp baking powder biscuit; celery; potatoes, baked, boiled or fried in deep fat; peas or some other fresh vegetable; coffee; fruit salad with crisp cookies or marjolines.

Menu No. 3—Cold soup; baked eggs with cheese or Boston roast; baked potatoes; lettuce salad; a sweet jelly, crab apple or quince, for example, or a preserve; rye bread; orange or banana shortcake; tea.

How to Grow Vegetables.

Just after a rain is a poor time to sow seeds. It is better to wait until the ground can be raked and harrowed easily. When transplanting is to be done, first wet the ground thoroughly. Then it will be possible to take up a good ball of earth with the plant, and the roots will not suffer.

Corn and melons should not be cultivated deeply. The roots grow near the surface, and merely stirring the soil sufficiently to create a dust mulch is all the plants require.

It is important to have the garden tools sharp. Some people never think of sharpening the blade of a hoe, but it is altogether worth while.

Squashes keep best if allowed to remain on the vines as long as possible before the season of hard frosts. Then they get thoroughly ripened and the shell well hardened.

Poultry manure is a good dressing for the vegetable garden if scattered over the ground in the spring and cultivated in. It is particularly good for forcing the growth of onions.

Seeds of beets, parsnips and carrots germinate slowly. Often weeds come up thickly before the plants appear, but the gardener is afraid to cultivate. A few radish seeds sown with the others will obviate this difficulty by marking the rows within a few days.

Some gardeners greatly improve their lettuce, Swiss chard and spinach by growing under a canopy of cheesecloth held about five feet above the ground by stakes or a light frame.

An excellent way to economize labor in watering plants is to sink a tomato can into the ground at the base of each plant, having first punched the bottom full of holes. The water poured into the can will reach the roots directly and not be wasted. Weak manure water may be given this way to excellent advantage if the plants need feeding.

Generally speaking, the depth to plant should be four times the diameter of the seeds.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but it's never said where pimples, skin eruptions, blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at The Noyes Drug Store. Adv. 40-43

A Joke.

A good joke on one of Bridgton's citizens is going the rounds. At the close of a hunting trip to Waterford he was given a bag of potatoes. Upon his arrival at home the bag was hanging out of the wagon with two potatoes in it.

In the meantime some people riding the opposite direction saw the potatoes and began picking them up, filling the wagon with them. Someone reported that "Boyd's Hill was strewn with potatoes," and an auto was called into service to collect the same, only to find them gone. Later word was given to the loser that he could have the potatoes by paying for the trouble of picking them up, the pay in this case to be to pick up as many for someone else.

WORKS WONDERS For Worms in Children.

The diseases of childhood are often hard to interpret. A nervous condition, restless at night, an abnormally large appetite or sometimes none, may indicate worms. In such cases a teaspoonful of "L. F." Atwood's Medicine at night and a small dose before a light breakfast the following morning is harmless, and will settle all doubt about worms being the cause. Many mothers already know this. One of them writes:—"My little boy, aged 6, has never been without 'L. F.' Atwood's Medicine since he was two, and I have found it invaluable for Worms, Constipation, etc."

Mrs. Adelbert E. Jellison, Franklin, Me.
If you have never used "L. F." Atwood's Medicine, write for a free sample. 35 cents for a large bottle at all stores.

Skipped with the Money.
Last week a burglar secured board at Frank Ring's under false pretences, saying that he was engaged in killing brown tail moths and his partner was coming later with a team, and mentioned a well-known person, who had recommended Mrs. Ring to them for a boarding place. Mrs. Ring and her son Henry occupied rooms on the second floor. The burglar was away at the time, and in the night she heard an unusual noise down stairs and in the morning her boarder was gone with what money he could find which was a little over $8, which was in Henry's bank. It was thought at first that more was taken and some notes but these have been found.
It isn't safe to trust any one nowadays especially a stranger. It is said that these same burglars tried to get into Frank Reed's house the same night.

WATERFORD.

Mon. Daniel Brown.
Daniel Brown, who for some weeks has been failing in health, died at his home in this village, Saturday night.

He was born in this town January 1, 1826, being one of a family of ten children of whom three survive, Mrs. Myra Bailey of Harrison, Mrs. Mary Hale of Augusta, Wis., and Mrs. Mary Chadbourne of Dacatur, Ill.

Sixty-three years ago Mr. Brown married Mary Brooks Stone, who survives him. To them were born two daughters, Florence, widow of Rev. O. A. Rounds, who resides here, and Helen, wife of Mellen Knight of North Waterford.

His fellow townsmen manifested their appreciation of his ability, sound judgment and sterling character by placing him in offices of honor and trust. He served for many years as trial justice and justice of the peace. In 1886 he represented his district in the State legislature and for over thirty years held the office of town treasurer. He was a charter member of Mt. Trem Lodge, F. & A. M., which was instituted about 47 years ago, and took an active part in its councils so long as his health permitted. In religion he was a Universalist and in politics a Democrat.

Besides the members of the family mentioned above who survive him, there are three grandsons, L. R. Rounds of Waterford, Ralph and Stanley Knight of North Waterford, and one grand daughter, Mary F. Rounds, and great-grand daughter, Ruth Evelyn Rounds of Waterford.

The funeral service was held at the house at 10 a. m. Tuesday, Rev. G. W. Stas officiating, and the members of Mt. Trem Lodge rendering the service of the Masonic ritual. Interment was made in Elm Vale cemetery.
